The Stout House is a contributing resource of the North East Historic District (CE-1525). The Victorian-style residence has an irregular form, numerous gabled rooflines, a gingerbreaded wraparound porch, and a variety of construction materials (slate roof, brick walls, stone foundation, fishscale shingles) that give it visual interest. A three-story tower with pyramidal slate roof and decorative diamond shingles, at the southwest front corner, gives the large structure additional height. Windows are a combination one-over-one and two-over-two sash with segmental arches and wooden sills. Associated with the house are two other buildings: a long frame garage with coal shed and furnace room and a small, front-gabled, brick commercial building used as a barber shop during the 1930s.

The Stout House is recommended eligible under National Register Criterion C. The residence is an impressive Victorian that dates to the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Its Victorian style is representative of a later construction period in North East, which experienced substantial early nineteenth-century development. The large scale, set back location, and unaltered architectural detailing of this building make it an excellent example of a late nineteenth-century residence in a small bayside town. Other residences of the same construction period exist in North East, but the Stout House has experienced the least amount of modern alterations and as such it stands out within the borough.

NAME: Stout House

LOCATION: 20 South Main Street, North East, MD

DATE: 1877-1898

ACCESS: Private

DESCRIPTION:

The Stout House is located within the NR-eligible North East Historic District (CE-1525) of which it is a contributing member. The house is a two-and-a-half-story, Victorian-style residence the dates to the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Its irregular form, numerous gabled rooflines and variety of construction materials give the dwelling visual interest. The house itself is brick with a stone foundation, slate roof, and wooden fishscale shingles in the gables. A three-story tower with pyramidal slate roof and decorative diamond shingles, at the southwest front corner, gives the large structure additional height. A full-width porch wraps around both sides of the façade culminating in an entrance on each side elevation. The porch is highly decorative with turned posts, spindles, and spandrels. Windows are a combination one-over-one and two-over-two sash with segmental arches and wooden sills. Associated with the house are two other buildings. The first is a long, one-story brick and frame structure that houses the furnace room, coal shed, and garage and was built in the early twentieth century. The second is a small (approximately 10-foot square), front-gable, brick commercial building that was built as a barber shop during the 1930s.

SIGNIFICANCE:

The Stout House should be considered to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C. The residence is an impressive Victorian that dates to the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Its Victorian style is representative of a later construction period in North East, which experienced substantial early nineteenth-century development. Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Stout House is located within the NR-eligible North East Historic District (CE-1525) of which it is a contributing member. The house sits on the east side of Main Street (MD Route 272) in the block between Cecil and West Avenues in the mid-eighteenth-century Chesapeake Bay town of North East. Despite its residential use, the property is located in the heart of North East's current downtown commercial district. Constructed between 1877 and 1898, the late nineteenth-century brick Victorian-style dwelling sits back from the road on its 17,775 square-foot town lot, instead of along the sidewalk like most of the other buildings along Main Street. The building's location and its impressive size and architectural detailing exhibit a commanding presence within the borough. The property also features an early twentieth-century detached furnace room/garage to the rear of the dwelling and a small brick commercial building (currently a clock shop) on the lot's southwest corner along Main Street.

The Stout House is a two-and-a-half-story Victorian-style residence the dates to the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Its irregular form, numerous gabled rooflines and variety of construction materials give the dwelling visual interest. The house itself is brick with a stone foundation, slate roof, and wooden fishscale shingles in the gables. A three-story tower with pyramidal slate roof and decorative diamond shingles, at the southwest front corner, gives the large structure additional height. A full-width porch wraps around both sides of the façade culminating in an entrance on each side elevation. The porch is highly decorative with turned posts, spindles, and spandrels. Windows are one-over-one sash with segmental arches and wooden sills. The windows on the north elevation are original two-over-two sash.

Behind the dwelling is a long one-story outbuilding that sits perpendicular to the house and extends to the alley at the rear of the lot. The oldest portion of the outbuilding (which is located closest to the house) is a brick furnace room. The furnace was placed in this building instead of in the basement of the house. A frame extension is located off the rear of the furnace room. The extension, covered with vertical wood siding, houses both a coal shed (with coal chute) and a garage. The current owner extended the garage within the past twenty years to house larger vehicles. The outbuilding has a long gable roof covered with asphalt shingles. Two swinging wooden garage doors are located on the rear of the garage facing the alley.

The second outbuilding on the property is a small (approximately 10-foot-square) brick commercial structure that sits at the southwest corner of the property. This front-gable building sits on a poured concrete foundation, has an early asphalt shingle roof and wooden shakes in the gables. The façade features an entry door and a multi-pane commercial window. Side windows are six-over-six. The building was constructed by Mr. Santo Lanteri as a barber shop during his ownership of the property (1934-51). Currently the building houses a clock shop (sales and repair).

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance projects, complete evaluation on a DOE Form – see manual.)

The Stout House should be considered to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C. The residence is an impressive Victorian that dates to the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Its Victorian style is representative of a later construction period in North East, which experienced substantial early nineteenth-century development. The large scale, set back location, and unaltered architectural detailing of this building make it an excellent example of a late nineteenth-century residence in a small bayside town. Other residences of the same construction period exist in North East, but the Stout House has experienced the least amount of modern alterations and as such it stands out within the borough.

By the time the Stout House was constructed between 1877 and 1898, North East had already been an important shipping and industrial town for over a century and a half (Johnston 1989). The town's location along the river and substantial natural resources provided additional successful industries besides iron ore production, which had spurred the development of the area. Other industries included milling, lumbering, fishing, agriculture, and firebrick and basket production. The town's location at a heavily traveled crossroads enabled the establishment of substantial nineteenth-century commercial and transportation-related businesses.

By 1877, Joseph Stout, a merchant, had an office and store across from the PW & B railroad depot to the north of North East's commercial district (Lake, Griffing & Stevenson 1877). In 1871, Stout had purchased three lots along the east side of Main Street from John Simpers for $700 (Cecil County Land Record Book DS 4:466). The lots totaled 90 square perches and bordered on the Presbyterian schoolhouse lot to the south and the West House lot, with a 1798 log house, to the north. By 1877, Stout had sold the northern third of his property and purchased an additional 300 square feet on the rear (east) of his parcel from Sarah Mauldin (AWM 10:271). It appears likely that Stout built the Victorian house after this. In 1898, Stout sold the house to Mary Anderson for $800 (JGW 2:371). Anderson's husband Andrew was a locally prominent businessman and county commissioner (Chapman 1897:227). Anderson and Ella Housekeeper (probably a daughter) sold the house back and forth for the next 36 years until Anderson's death in 1934. Later that year, the property was sold to Santo Lanteri for $5 (SRA 21:221). It is likely that Lanteri's wife, Sarah, was the daughter of Housekeeper. Lanteri, a barber, constructed a small brick commercial building at the southwestern corner of the lot along Main Street, which he used as his shop (Sanborn Map Company 1933).

The Stout House appears in Cecil County's architectural history, At the Head of the Bay, as the Cramer House (Blumgart 1996:395). It is unclear why the resource was named the Cramer House because a deed trace confirmed that no one named Cramer ever owned the property.
